A little room for new ideas.

A good document is a starting point.

Keep the useful parts. Give the rest another draft.

This line has a deliberately split word: remarkable. The cleanup option joins it back together.

A small plan, with real table cells

Item	Budget	Status
Research	1,250 EUR	Reviewed
Design	850 EUR	In progress
Testing	400 EUR	Next draft

Nothing here belongs to a real person or organisation.

Good ideas can move across different formats.

A page should not lock the words away.

Keep a copy of the original nearby.

Check the details before sharing your work.

RIGHT COLUMN START. Continue on this side.

The reading order matters more than symmetry.

Text can look right and read incorrectly.

Review the finished document in your editor.

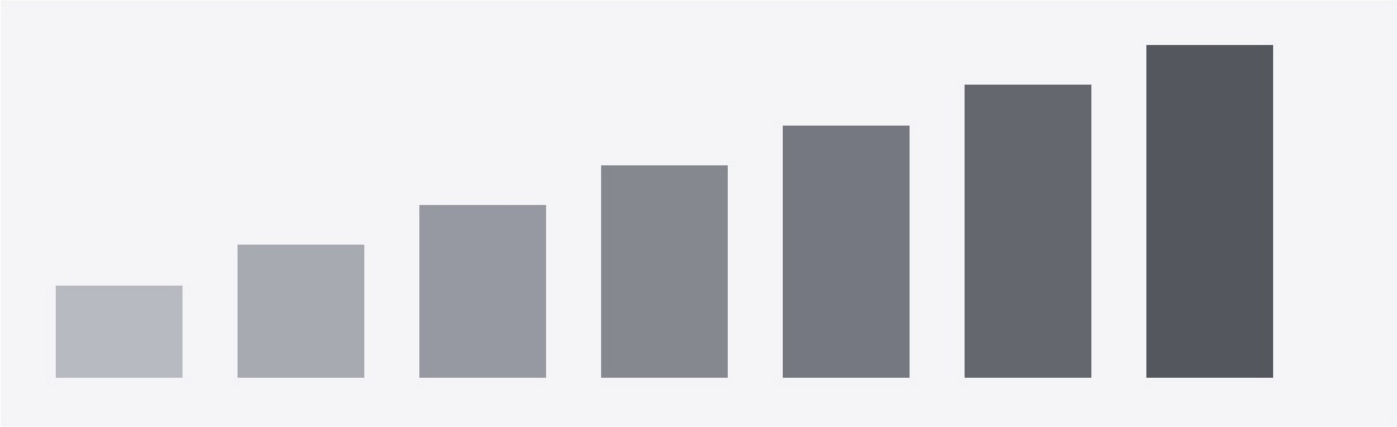

Give important names and numbers another look.

A little more clarity.

A SYNTHETIC DOCUMENT / NO PERSONAL DATA

01 / A simple chart. Look at the edges when you zoom in.

Pick the pixels you need.

PNG keeps rendered text and linework crisp.

JPG trades some detail for a different file size.

Try 150 ppi, then compare it with 300 ppi.
